Kentucky Good Roads Federation Launches Drive For Amendments

More than 200 members of the Kentucky Good Road Federation launched the drive to ratify the Good Roads and Soldier Vote Amendments at a special dinner meeting held at Lafayette Hotel in Lexington, last Monday evening.

This meeting is a signal for concerted action on the part of every progressive, thinking Kentuckian to get out and work for the ratification of these two important amendments. Len B. Shouse, president of the Federation, said: "No politics are involved in this matter. The general assembly united in approval of both amendments with only one dissenting vote, and now these amendments come before voters on November 6th, deserving the full support of every Kentuckian who wants to see this state keep pace with the other states of the Union in building and maintaining better roads."

The Fulton county committee is composed of the following men: Joe Davis, chairman; Fred Stokes, vice chairman; Clardie Holland, secretary; Roscoe Stone, meetings and speakers; Paul Bushart and J. T. Howard, publicity and advertising; R. H. White, posters; C. C. Caldwell and Bill Browning, leaflet distribution; Dee McNeil and C. E. Corum, election day poll workers; R. E. Sanford, C. P. Mabry and J. T. Davey, commercial concerns.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, October 14, 1945.

The Golden Text is: "Look upon Zion, the city of our solemnities: The inhabitant shall not say, I am sick: the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity." (Isa. 33:20, 24.)

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "And as ye go, preach, saying, The Kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give." (Matt. 10:7, 8.)

ANNUAL DAY MEETING

October 17, is the date for the Annual Meeting of Fulton County Homemakers Association, which will be held in the auditorium of the Christian Church in Hickman. Sissy Gregg, foods columnist for the Courier Journal of Louisville, Ky., will be the guest speaker of the day. The women of the Christian Church will serve lunch. Every homemaker in Fulton County should try to attend this meeting.

Success in life depends upon persistent effort, upon the improvement of moments more than upon any other thing.—Mary Baker Eddy.

Chamber Of Commerce In Active Session

Program for Cleaning Out and Improving the Harris Fork Creek Was Discussed at Length.

Fulton Chamber of Commerce in a meeting last week brought into focus the community's attention upon the flooding Harris Fork Creek which inundates much of the business district ever now and then. It was pointed out during the discussions that definite help is now assured from the states of Kentucky and Tennessee, as well as from the Illinois Central System.

R. H. White, chairman of the creek committee, gave a complete report, citing information gained from a recently completed survey. Recommendations were made upon facts thus obtained, and the cost of the creek improvement program will run into many thousands dollars.

The work will call for cleaning out the creek bed to provide a 30-foot bottom, and straightening out the channel of the creek through the city. When this is done, it was pointed out, that the carrying capacity of the creek will have been increased fifty percent.

The finance committee is composed of W. S. Atkins, Clyde Williams, J. D. Davis, Leslie Weeks and J. E. Fall, Sr., and plans are being formulated now to raise $55,000 to carry out the creek project.

H. H. Bugg, president of the Chamber of Commerce, announced that a right of way committee will be named to carry out this phase of the creek project.

Dark Fired and Air Cured Tobacco Referenda

List of dark tobacco growers who are eligible to vote in the referendum on October 20 to determine if they want quotas on the 1946 crop of dark air-cured and fire-cured tobacco now are being compiled by Community Committees of the AAA and are open to inspection in the County AAA Office.

The referenda were called pursuant to a Congressional resolution which provides quotas on the 1946 crop of dark air-cured and fire-cured tobacco. Quotas cannot be in effect unless approved by at least two-thirds of the eligible growers voting in the referendum.

H. M. Pewitt, Chairman of the County AAA Committee, said that "any person who has an interest in a 1945 crop of fire-cured or dark air-cured tobacco as owner, tenant, or sharecropper is eligible to vote in the referendum held on the kind of tobacco he is producing." No person, he added, is entitled to more than one vote, even though he may be engaged in production of these types of tobacco in two or more communities, counties, or states.

"Actually," Chairman Pewitt said, "there will be two referenda held on October 20, one for dark air-cured and one for fire-cured. The producer is entitled to vote in the referendum relative to which every type of tobacco he is growing. If he grew both fire-cured and dark air-cured this year, he is entitled to vote in both referenda."

As in the past, Mr. Pewitt pointed out, growers will vote on three propositions: (1) do you favor marketing quotas for three years?; (2) are you opposed to marketing quotas for three years, but favor the quota for one year?; or (3) are you opposed to quotas?

If quotas are approved, acreage allotments for 1946 will be the same as in 1945, except that a small acreage will be available for establishing allotments on farms on which no tobacco has been grown for the past five years; and a small acreage will be available for establishing allotments for farms which produced dark air-cured or fire-cured tobacco in 1943, 1944 or 1945 without an allotment in 1943, and for adjusting upward 1943 individual acreage allotments.

The legislation authorizing quotas on the 1946 crop of dark tobacco, every type of tobacco is growing.

vides that loans and other price supporting measures will become effective for fire-cured tobacco at 75 per cent of the Burley tobacco loan rate and for dark air-cured tobacco at 66 2/3 per cent of the Burley loan rate. No loans or other price supports will be effective in 1946, however, if growers have disapproved marketing quotas. Loans will be available on the 1945 crop of fire-cured and dark air-cured tobacco, even though quotas are disapproved.

OVER 21

It would seem as if one of the important industries around here—pulpwood—has finally come of age.

A sentence tucked away in the latest Department of Commerce Industry Report on Pulp and Paper gives the "tip-off" on how this industry has grown up.

The sentence reads: "Estimates by the Department of Commerce in June indicated that the paper and allied products industries, plus the printing and publishing group, anticipate capital outlays in the 12 months after V-E Day of about 530 million dollars compared with 136 million dollars in 1939."

$530,000,000. It doesn't take much reading between the lines to figure out that if this industry can tackle such an expansion program in the first year after the war, it has become a man-sized factor in the economy of the nation.

Nor does it take much figuring to see that an industry that can extend its facilities to the tune of 530 million dollars isn't exactly worried about growing pains.

The fact is that wartime developments, plus the efforts of this and other communities to meet wartime developments has made it possible for the pulp and paper industry to blossom into full maturity . . .

For example: Packaging, made from pulpwood and developed to resist rot, has found a peacetime use in new wrappings that will protect food against mold. Shell containers have pointed the way to a new type of wear-resistant flooring.

We, in this community, will profit by these and hundreds of other new uses of pulpwood.

One of the benefits to us, already a fact, is the need of the industry for workers. Proof of this is the employment campaign now being conducted by the industry and the U. S. Employment Service to place men in jobs HERE. That woods producers will benefit is indicated in the urgent needs of mills for top quality pulpwood NOW.

COME HOME!

The war blasted a big hole in the population around here. Not only did we lose many of our young men and women to the armed services, but patriotism prompted quite a number of our former neighbors to seek work in some of the larger cities.

Now, with the war over, our young men and women in the Army and Navy will be returning to civilian life. Wherever they may be as this is being written, they are no doubt planning peacetime careers. To these patriotic Americans we say: "Come home."

Unemployment is mounting in the big cities. It is expected to reach 5,000,000 by October; it may exceed 8,000,000 by next Spring. Many of our ex-neighbors have lost their war industry jobs or may be expected to lose them shortly. To these friends, whose patriotism took them so far afield, we also say: "Come home."

Of course our buildings aren't as big as those in larger cities but we can offer a little more room to breathe. People in this community may not live so close together but we do get to know and love our neighbors. Big city jobs may even pay a little more money but big city dollars don't go nearly as far in buying the things we need to live.

It is in the spirit of the "good neighbor" that we extend this invitation to ex-soldiers, sailors and marines, and to ex-war-workers too. Here, in our forest lands and farming country there is no reconversion problem. The products of our farms and rural industries are in great demand. The need for pulpwood, for example, is greater even than during the war. Without the boxes, cartons, crates, containers and other paper and paper-board packaging materials made from pulpwood, the entire reconversion plan would suffer.

Cutting pulpwood is healthy, invigorating work. Wages are high. The demand for top quality pulpwood is constant. It is an industry with an impressive peacetime future.

There is a great big "welcome" mat awaiting these friends of ours in the form of a good job. To our ex-servicemen and ex-war-workers we say: "COME HOME!"

ECONOMIC INCENTIVES

The Detroit Board of Commerce is taking the lead in a movement which has already spread beyond the borders of Michigan, and which gives indications of becoming national in scope—the "Prosperity from the Ground Up" program. One handicap under which it is laboring is the difficulty of getting across to the public a clear understanding of its objectives. It is based on the fact that a sound and profitable agriculture is the basic "must" of economic prosperity.

Immediate reaction to the mention of "agriculture" is two-fold—the farmer may be inclined to think this is just another city folks' well-intentioned but ill-advised attempt to patronize him; and the average urban dweller shrugs his shoulders and says that he doesn't know much, if anything, about farming and so it can't possibly concern him. And that is where both are 100 percent wrong.

The program does seek to show city folk how all industry and business are based on agriculture, and that their personal well-being is directly dependent upon it. As an example, take soil conservation. Farmers neither want nor need city folks to call it to their attention. Why do not more of them practice it? Because they do not see that it pays them to do so, or it doesn't pay them enough. In Detroit the attempt is being made to develop new and more profitable markets for farm products, both foodstuffs and industrial raw materials, so that farmers will have an economic incentive to improve production. No attempt is being made, nor will be made, to urge farmers to raise more soy beans. But if an enlarged and more profitable market is developed, more soy bean acreage will follow automatically. And everyone will benefit—the manufacturer who secures a needed supply of raw materials, the factory worker employed in the processing, and all down the line, including, of course, the farmer who raises the beans. And he will then have the money, and the incentive, to do something about conserving his soil to the best possible uses.

It shouldn't matter one iota to the farmer that the industrialist and business man is actuated by desire for more profits to himself. If the farmer benefits, that's the main thing to him.

The farmer supplies two-thirds of all the raw materials of industry and practically all of our food, clothing and shelter. If there were a proper balance economically, he would be the market for at least 40 per cent of the total product of industry. As conditions now stand, he consumes only 10 to 12 per cent of industrial production.

The big task is to arrive at a proper balance between the vitally important farmer-producer and the rest of us.

TIDBITS

PERSISTENT SPEECH

Every term of school I come in contact with some expression that supposedly died before Queen Elizabeth sat on the throne of England. Perfectly well-dressed and finely-trained boys and girls suddenly insert into the most average conversation some word that has not been in style in generations. The rest of the sentence in which such a word appears may be immaculate and modern; the subject of the conversation may be one of the most immediate interest: a new show, a trip by bus or train, a school event, a new book, a soldier home from the war. Finding an old-time word in such a setting is like suddenly discovering a dinosaur in some of the swamps where I go to study birds.

Some years ago I was discussing the weather, that old, old subject, with one of my best students. From long association, I suppose, she accidentally dropped a "hit" right in the midst of perfectly modern speech. She had come from one of the best families of Warren County, her people had people had been known ever since

POST-WAR FLYING IN YOUR HOME TOWN

By C. C. CAMPBELL, Member, Aviation Writers Association, Washington, D. C.

The Aviation Committee

When it comes to consideration of the establishment of an airport or other aviation landing facility, each community finds itself faced with its individual needs and problems. A landing facility for each of two communities only a few miles apart may have to meet quite different requirements.

Before construction can start, even before a bond issue can be listed, pertinent information should be tabulated and plans made accordingly. Such matters as location of the airport, size, prospective use, cost, potential income, related business enterprise and many other sub-had an intimate connection with any phase of aviation, such as having a part in the Civil Air Patrol program, or experience as commercial air operators, they would by all means be urged to participate.

In addition to representatives of the community's officialdom, there should be a cross section of local business and social enterprise. The components of this will differ according to the area, but generally speaking, may include merchants, professional men, labor leaders, farmers and school principals and teachers.

This is recognized as a logical procedure since the airport must be a community affair and if it is to jects must be studied, at least in a preliminary way, if the venture is to be a success.

An airport is usually considered a public utility, much the same as streets, highways and parks. The chief difference is that an airport may ultimately provide self-supporting revenue if correctly planned, whereas other community utilities generally do not.

Based upon experience, aviation authorities advise that the first step taken by a community should be the organization of an air landing facility committee. All members preferably should be local people who know the community's history, its relation to other communities and to the state, and its plans for the future.

It is suggested that committee members might include representatives of the city or town council, chamber of commerce, civic clubs, and newspapers. If there are any persons in the community who have succeed must cater to all local interests. It will probably surprise many people to discover how many varied activities in even a small community will be influenced in one way or another by the coming era of flight.

The appointed committee, after obtaining and classifying the necessary local data, will then be in a position to take up its preliminary plans with aviation authorities and profit by their experienced advice and criticism. Forty-four states now have aviation boards or commissions ready to help and Washington authorities such as the Civil Aeronautics Administration of the Department of Commerce, the Personal Aircraft Council of the Aircraft Industries Association of America and the National Aeronautic Association, will also aid the local planning group.

This is the fourth of a series of articles on post-war flying and its effect on community life. The next article, "Determining Local Needs," will appear in an early issue.

I first came into this part of the country and long before as the up-and-coming type, several of the older brothers and sisters had graduated from college, and even the young lady herself was not a freshman. And yet this ancestral word, long out of good use before Shakespeare was born, was still a part of her vocabulary. I had a hard time reconciling her outward culture with this remnant of past ages.

The double negative used to be perfectly all right. If one negative was good, the two made a negation twice as strong. Even four and five in a single sentence can be found in Chaucer. Strictly speaking, this type of syntax lost its official standing well over two hundred years ago. But in almost any group of people it can be heard daily. Oddly enough, English teachers have taught that two negatives make an affirmative, forgetting that "I ain't got no money" has never been misunderstood. Really, two negatives rarely make an affirmative, practically never in ordinary speech; a speaker almost has to be educated, and consciously so at that, to use two negatives deliberately to make a strong positive.

Our English verbs are, after all, pretty simple. With the exception of some 165 that have some type of irregularity, all have -ed endings for the past tense and the past participle. And yet we hear every day violations in the use of verbs that are ununderstandable. Those violations vary from the left-overs such as clum or dove or swole to the use of the past participle for the past, like "I taken a chill," or the barbarous bursted. In recording these picturesque errors in speech, especially verbs, I hope that I am not being just another English teacher. Frankly, I rather like unfeigned ignorance; it is second in value only to genuine learning. The irritating thing is the effort to be correct that breaks away from the obviously unlearned usage but fails to arrive at the learned. I much prefer to hear "I done it" to "I got my work did." And I have heard just that very same I have heard just that very expression.

The distinction between transitive and intransitive verbs seems one that even ignorant people might learn. I have tried to remember how I felt when I said that things set. The word set was not in my early vocabulary; set served every purpose. I do recall that rise and raise were fairly well differentiated, but my friends and I said have rose. We used to laugh at people who used taken as the past tense, but we consistently said hvae took.

After all, probably language gets into our system so early that only a major operation can change it. If every body used standard speech, the poor folklorist would not have anything to collect.

PREPARE TO BUILD

Brass Hat Bowles of OPA has lost out in his efforts to check new building enterprises. He failed to get across his "scarecrow" that building materials are so scarce that the country would be threatened with inflation and everything else, if restrictions on construction of buildings were removed.

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, backed Reconversion Director John W. Snyder, who has ordered all limits on reconstruction ended October 15. The Senator told Bowles that if his advice was followed: "What you will be doing will be squeezing the little fellow who supplies materials, and letting the speculator go free. I think all price controls should be lifted and water be permitted to find its own level."

Under the new program for expanding the building industry there will be an active campaign to increase the supply of building materials, and if necessary price and wage increases as well as priority to break bottle-necks. At the same time, Federal Credit agencies will exercise care and discretion to prevent excessive and unsound lending on mortgages. In order to do this they will enlist voluntary cooperation of banks and other lending institutions.

Seeding cover crops is one good way to keep wayward soils at home.

If you doubt the danger of careless fire, remember that someone is burned to death every 50 minutes and 1,000 homes are destroyed every day.

No need to break your back trying to kill broom sedge, bitter-weed, and Poor Joe in your pasture. Put on limestone, phosphate and other minerals supplements in needed amounts and desirable grasses and clovers will do the job for you.

Hog Supply Is Short; Farmers Save Gilts

Sow Per Farm Advised For Home Meat Production. Pointers On Feeding Outlined

With the smallest number of hogs on farms in several years, Tennessee farmers should keep all well-bred gilts on farms for breeding purposes, states J. S. Robinson, Extension swine specialist, U-T College of Agriculture.

In July 1944 Tennessee farmers marketed 47,883 hogs on the State's four leading markets. In July this year there were 13,100 head sold. With the exception of four counties, it is doubtful if there are sufficient hogs to supply home meat needs of the rural population, he points out.

The drop in number of sows farrowing has been excessively heavy—from 224,000 for spring farrow in 1943, to 155,000 in 1944; and now down to an estimated 122,000 for 1945. With fall breeding showing a like proportion in decline, there is little chance to recoup the number of hogs on Tennessee farms until the fall of 1946, Mr. Robinson states.

It is therefore important that at least one sow to the farm be kept if Tennesseans are to supply the demand for pork and in any way to meet home meat supply needs. A home meat supply program which is based on one sow per farm is a sound one at all times. To do this, many thousands of well bred gilts must be cut back for breeding purposes this fall.

The use of good pasture saves from 10 to 25 percent for the corn required in hog feeding and as much as 50 percent of the protein supplement. The use of good pasture and forage crops will not only reduce the cost of feeding pigs, but lessens farm labor and helps to control parasites and diseases. When corn is comparatively high in price, may be possible to lower the cost of the grain in the ration by replacing some, or all of the corn with other grains.

Spring gardens in fall are possible for those who plant radishes, lettuce, and onions at once and on good soil.

Why waste time and feed on scrub livestock?

Milk is a safe food all the way from baby to grandpa.

Here's Work For the Future

We want every Kentuckian to know our future plans. For Kentucky and the Telephone Company have been working closely together for many years.

"What's coming up?" Quite a lot—the greatest expansion program in the history of the telephone in Kentucky as soon as materials are available.

It means spending millions of dollars to provide telephones for all who have been waiting for them. This is one of our first jobs! A greatly expanded telephone program for our farmer friends is also in process. Expansion of long distance service is being scheduled too. It will include the installation of coaxial cables to handle more calls with speed and convenience for you, and provide more facilities for that exciting visual art—television. A mass of construction is to be done and a new service to motor vehicles is also in the offing.

What does it all add up to? For one thing, it means more opportunity for the returning veteran, for all Kentuckians. It insures an adequate telephone system for Kentucky and that is essential to the state's growth. Each gives impetus to the other, as our friendly relationship has in the past.

More work for the future. That's what it means, when you analyze it, and Kentuckians have a knack of getting at the heart of things. They like to see the marshalling of Men, Money and Materials; that American combination which put Kentucky out in front, and keeps it there.

Yes, there's prosperity in work. And prosperity means happiness for Kentuckians. As for the 3,326 men and women of the Telephone Company in Kentucky, we face the future with confidence!

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

To retain the goodness of garden fresh vegetables, they should be cooked quickly in little water. Contrary to the usual practice, that applies to beets as well as other vegetables. Peeled, then diced in half-inch cubes, beets will not "bleed to death," say food specialists at the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics, but will cook as quickly as other root vegetables. They also will have a sweeter flavor than when cooked whole.

Diced Harvard Beets

8 medium beets
2 tablespoons butter or margarine.
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons sugar or syrup
1-2 cup water the beets were cooked in
1-4 cup vinegar
3-4 teaspoon salt.

Peel beets and dice. Cook in a small amount of water until tender. Make a sauce of fat, flour, syrup, water and vinegar and boil until flour is thoroughly cooked.

Pour over hot beets.

Menu: Creamed stuffed eggs, corn pudding, harvard beets, crisp vegetable strips, rolls and butter, and deep dish fruit pit.

SELF-REGULATION

A high aim....

Throughout the centuries beer and ale have been recognized as beverages of moderation. Kentucky brewers are determined that such a reputation shall be maintained by seeing to it that wholesome surroundings prevail in every retail outlet in the State.

For over five years Kentucky brewers have voluntarily supported the Kentucky Committee of the United States Brewers Foundation whose field men call regularly on all licensees and outline clearly the principles of their program and all regulations governing the sale of beer and ale. When an occasional non-observance of rules is discovered, prompt and effectual action is taken. Self-Regulation works.

MAYBE IT'S ME!

By RUTH TAYLOR

When everything is crossways and upset, when you feel that all those around you are either malingering or doing their jobs badly, when you are overwhelmed by the cross stupidity and inefficiency of those in authority—then is the time to stop and say "Maybe it's me!"

Is the world against us? Or we against the world? Are people always fighting us? Or are we combative? Have we a perpetual chip upon our shoulders? Have we been interested only in our own rights and in our own problems?

Are we misunderstood by our fellow men? Is everyone also out of step—Well, what has been our attitude toward others? Have we been open and friendly, ready to understand and to be understood, or have we assumed a "take it or leave it" attitude? It works both ways.

We cannot create good feeling by force. We cannot legislate friendship. We cannot get full cooperation on demand. But—we can draw sympathy and understanding for our own problems by our own attitudes towards the difficulties of others.

We like people who like us. We are friendly toward those who give us friendship. We are considerate of those who are fair to us. This works in reverse, as well.

"Maybe it's me!" Maybe the trouble is with us. Let's be doubly sure our own attitude is right before we start criticising the other fellow. Let's do some self-straightening-out first.

Let's not be so quick on the trigger to defend ourselves. If our actions are right, we don't have to put up a defense—we just have to tell the facts. Let's be readier to understand the opinion and wishes of others and deal with them as we wish them to deal with us.

"Maybe it's me!" That's the place to start to improve the conditions around us. And, after all, —maybe it is me!

A man may fall into a thousand perplexities, but if his heart be upright and his intelligence unclouded, he will issue them all without dishonor.—Robert Lewis Stevenson.

YOUR
New Main Street
IS COMING!

Your "Main Street" is changing. Maybe you've noticed it already. And from now on new sights will be coming thick and fast.

You'll see them in the store windows—the products of postwar America—many new, many familiar standbys—all things you've waited long to own.

All the changes won't happen tomorrow, or next week, or next month. But you'll find every walk down your "Main Street" a new experience, and a pleasant one.

Bringing new products to your merchants is a job the Illinois Central will be working on day and night. Freight cars formerly filled with war freight will be busy from now on delivering the products of peace to you.

And you can be sure of this: the Illinois Central will help your merchants stock these products the moment they're ready for distribution.

America must have railroads—solvent, strong railroads, manned by alert and respected workmen, directed by progressive management, modernized to fit the needs of postwar America; railroads operating under sound policies of government and commanding the confidence of the American people.

RED CROSS HOME NURSING

HOW HANDY ARE YOUR HANDS?

WHEN YOUR SICK CHILD is tired of lying on her back do you hoist her upright, dump a couple of pillows behind her back, and let her slouch in an uncomfortable position? Or do you skillfully make a sturdy backrest from a cardboard box and place the pillows against it so that she will be firmly supported to maintain good sitting posture?

WHEN THE DOCTOR ORDERS a steam inhalation to relieve the congestion from Sally's bad cold, do you look at him in wide-eyed wonderment and say, "What's that?" Or do you efficiently improvise a steam tent from an umbrella and give the treatment by making an inhalator from a teakettle and funnel?

DOCTORS ARE SAYING, "One person in every household should know home nursing." Most Red Cross chapters are offering free courses in home nursing taught by professional nurses. You learn how to improvise hospital equipment, give bed baths, prepare soft and liquid diets. The free courses offered by the Red Cross in home nursing will teach you to be a capable home assistant to your doctor. He'll appreciate your competence, and you'll earn grateful thanks from your family.

If there is no home nursing course offered at present in your community, ask your Red Cross chapter how you may help organize one.

the service officers of local American Legion posts and other service and civic organizations. These services are rendered, regardless of their nature, without charge.

During the war the major cost of all production has been paid by the government. There was no competition. There was no question about whether John Jones or Bill Brown could pay the cost of an article. That situation will not prevail now that the war has ended. John Jones and Bill Brown will be looking for a saw, hammer, stove, washing machine, radio or automobile at a price. If the price is too high they won't buy it, and the price will be based on the cost of production. Labor leaders can block reconversion at the outset by exorbitant demands.

IT'S OVER—OR IS IT?

By RUTH TAYLOR

It's over. Oh, sure, there are lots of pieces to be picked up, and lots of loose ends to be tied together—but, it is over.

Now we can go back to the serious business of living. Now the tension and strain of a single purpose and a single thought are done with. Now we don't have to think—should we do this? Have we the right to spend that? Are we interfering with what should be done? What is our duty? All that is over. Or is it?

We did a pretty good job on this war—considering our bad start—considering the indifference that wasted time, the blindness that made us unaware that a plague loose in the world would inevitably menace us. When we came face to face with facts, we proved what we, as a people and as a united nation, could do. But—do we want to have to prove it all over again?

Are we going to sink into the slump of selfishness, into the quagmire of self-interest, to be lost in the mirage of self-conceit?

Or—are we going right on doing the best we can for every one, so that each may share in the well-being of the nation, that a strong foundation be built under the democracy for which we have fought? Are we going to go right ahead—considering first the needs of the nation, second, the needs of our neighbors, and third and lastly our own desires?

The practical economy of this has been proven to us. It is the precious knowledge we must salvage from the holocaust of war. It is the gold paid for by the lives of thousands of our youth.

We have seen what a united people, a united community, a united nation can accomplish in war. Can we do less in peace? For mark it well, if we let matters drift, if we return to our old manner of blindfold living, we shall one day have another crisis to meet.

Futile Efforts To Attract Industry With "Cut-Rate" Power Is Sad Theme Of This Modern Tale Of Two Cities

THIS might be called "A Modern Tale of Two Cities." The elements of melodrama are present. In each instance a small community is awakened from tranquil slumbers by a glittering fairy godfather in the form of a branch of the Federal Government. Sudden prosperity, astounding growth into a veritable metropolis, industrial stability—these are the things promised.

The promises have now collapsed, the rosy dreams faded. The magic wand of "cheap power" has proved a broken reed. And the disillusioned residents wonder what went wrong; why, after millions of tax dollars were spent, the promised prosperity failed to materialize.

Tupelo Has Bad Luck
Tupelo, Miss., was the first town to receive TVA power. Its counterpart in the Pacific Northwest is Stevenson, Wash., first beneficiary of "cut-rate" power from the huge Bonneville Dam. Here is the first chapter in this modern tale of two cities.

Expert publicists ballyhooed Tupelo's "cheap" power rates throughout the nation. It was hailed as the first practical application of TVA rates to a community seeking industry. Yet ten years after the big event, not a single new factory had located in Tupelo. And one old one had moved elsewhere.

No New Industries
Listen to the editor of the Tupelo Journal: "We had new industries, dairy programs and other progressive developments ten or fifteen years ago (before TVA) but within the last few years we have not gone forward. In fact, in many ways we have slipped."

Now for Chapter Two. Six years have elapsed since Bonneville Dam power became available in Stevenson, Wash., at an arbitrary rate 17 per cent less than the general rate charged outside a 15-mile radius of the big dam.

As in the case of Tupelo, not a single new industry has been attracted by cut-rate power. When a CVA modeled upon the discredited Tennessee Valley Authority was proposed, the Stevenson Chamber of Commerce expressed its blunt disapproval in a resolution which said, in part:

Phony Prosperity?
"We believe the plan to form a Columbia Valley Authority... is only another step to concentrate authority in Washington, D. C., and we believe if the citizenry are properly informed they will oppose it."

It is over—but it has just begun. We can go on to new victories. We can go on to conquer the twin plagues of disease and poverty, the armies of dissension, the hosts of understanding—provided we do it as we did in war—together. It's over—or is it?

Increasing the egg production per 100 hens by 10 per cent usually worth as much to the flock owner as decreasing the cost of feed 50 cents per 100 pounds.

The leaves of good hay constitute from one-third to one-half of the total volume but they contain about two-thirds of the total protein.

It is not the farmer with a well-stocked pantry and storage bin who lies awake nights and worries about the possibility of depression.

Can Eat Anything Now Gives Retonga Credit

Distress From Acid Indigestion, Painful Muscles And Weak, Exhausted Feeling Promptly Relieved, States Mrs. Norton Feels Better Than In Years.

"My father recommended Retonga to me and I feel so much better now that I can never thank him or this grand medicine enough," happily declares Mrs. H.

R. Norton, well known resident of Route 1, College Park, Ga., in praising this famous Vitamized gastric tonic.

I did not have strength enough to stay up all day and I had about given up hope of ever feeling much better," continued Mrs. Norton. "Acid indigestion caused me so much distress that I simply dreaded to eat. Often I felt like the gas pressure up against my chest would cut off my breath. I seemed full of toxic poisons from sluggish elimination and at times every muscle in my body felt sore and achy. I slept poorly, and I fell off to only eighty-six pounds and felt so exhausted I had to do my housework a little at a time.

"Retonga gave me grand relief. I have regained several pounds, and I feel much better and stronger than in years. I can never say enough in praise of Retonga."

Retonga is intended to relieve distress due to Vitamin B-1 deficiency, constipation, insufficient flow of digestive juices in the stomach, and loss of appetite. Accept no substitute. Retonga may be obtained at DeMyer Drug Co.—adv
